Occurrence -

My cousin brought me home. I live on a  dead-end court or circle situation.

The neighbor has a basketball hoop with where you <sup>stand to</sup> throw in ~~over~~ the street. First it was their for their 2 children, no prob. developed. Now up to 20 children of different nationalities. This nite they stood all over the street defying anyone to drive through. One stood in front of her truck & stared at her with others. She just waited. Finally they gave up.

Someone apparently called police or they were near to see.

I called but they were already outside.

The policeman <sup>(P)</sup> said he told them they could play in the street all they wanted. I disagreed with him. Anyway they all went home. The basketball is still there. Why should they play there? Would they in other affluent neighborhoods or we not good enough to have police protection?
